

Utah Gives Back

ScenicView Academy

February 17, 2020

Utah has one of the highest rates of Autism in the nation. Nearly 1 of every 54 children born in Utah is on the autism spectrum. The vast majority of autism services and resources are directed toward supporting children, but “children” with autism will spend the majority of their lives as adults with autism, many of whom will struggle to get the support they need to lead successful and independent lives.

ScenicView Academy in Provo helps young adults with autism live, work, and thrive! ScenicView students receive the personalized support they need to obtain gainful employment, live independently in the community, progress in their academic abilities, and engage in meaningful social relationships. Students are mentored by award winning autism experts, and mental health support is provided by clinically licensed therapists. All on a campus designed for autism.

The Noorda Scholarship program ensures students have access to affordable tuition. To learn more, please visit S V Academy dot org.

SelectHealth recognizes the critical role that ScenicView Academy plays in our community, as another example of how Utah Gives Back.
